THE EDITO

By Maurice Benzaquen

After having been IT Director at the software publisher XRT, Maurice took charge of the creation and structuring of the SaaS service offering for the Medium and Large Businesses division of Sage France. He is now Business Developer and is responsible for the commercial development of the Cloud offer.

The manager's cyber stress is on the rise: how do we reduce it?

In 2022, a plethora of studies awarded cyber risks the unfortunate title of greatest threat to businesses. While we understand that cybersecurity issues, which are at the heart of managers' concerns, are a factor of anxiety, this cyber stress is not inevitable. Here are a few habits that can help reduce pressure... and risks.

[Questions about the metaverse. Episode 1] Sexual assault: time for action

By Fabrice Deblock

After just a few months of existence, Facebook's Horizon Worlds metaverse has already seen blatant sexual assault. Its virtual nature does nothing to lessen the violence that the victims experience. It is an area still devoid of legislation.

2022 FIFA World Cup: Qatar's Cybersecurity Measures

By Antoun Beyrouthy

On the 2nd of December 2010, FIFA president Sepp Blatter announced that the FIFA World Cup 2022 will be held in Qatar. Accordingly, the small Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) member state would have around twelve years to build the stadiums, find a solution for the hot weather issues, reinforce its airport's infrastructure, and expand the fleet of its flagship Airline.

[FIC 2023 theme] In Cloud should we trust?

By Guillaume Tissier & Army General (2S) Marc Watin-Augouard

Public cloud computing is driving the digital transformation. With an adoption rate of just 40% in Europe, the market potential for providers and productivity gains for end clients are colossal. However, the choice cannot simply come down to functional and financial criteria since this choice constitutes a long-term commitment.
